About People and Things

by C. B. McDowell

JEFF BOUGHT OWN MULE
Judge Ira A. Hutchison of Panama City, Fla., well-known in Elba, writes in the Bay County Citizen, giving an illustration of the rare jokes played on each other by some of Coffee County's old-timers of the late 1800's:

Jeff Ham, one of Coffee County's best businessmen made annual pilgrimages to the Last Resort, on camp hunting trips. It was the little lake just east of Bill Holloway's Seabreeze Hotel, and was reached then from Coffee County, Ala., where Jeff Ham lived and operated many farms, over a wagon trail down the west side of the Choctawhatchee River to Gwoford, where Andrew Jackson ferried his army across the river on his march from St. Marks to Pensacola many years before. Although Jeff Ham had lost an arm in the War between the States, he was one of the thriftiest and most successful farmers in Coffee County.

"Every spring, when the wild turkeys began to gobble, he combined pleasure with business in going to the Gulf to fetch back some venison, turkeys and fish to give a real dinner to his help on the farm."

"Jim Cohen, the County's most renowned prankster, lived near Mr. Ham, and was contacted by Mr. Ham with a proposition that Cohen and his wife should furnish a mule and make the trip with John Harper and other neighbors to the Last Resort to hunt and fish."

"Ham informed Cohen that the trip had already been planned and all that remained for Cohen to do was to join Ham by furnishing a mule to make up a double team, or else Jeff Ham would have to use a single mule to draw his buggy and would have to do all the driving."

"Jim Cohen, with a mischievous thought in mind said, 'Jeff, I can't possibly get away on the day you have set to leave, but I'll come to you all Friday night.'"

"After the party left, Cohen went over to one of Ham's farmers and said, 'Jeff Ham sent me over to get that fast-traveling young mule,' and rode the animal home and hitched it to the buggy and left for the Last Resort."

"On arrival at the camp, Jim noticed Jeff looking up at the mule, walking around it several times, and inspecting it closely. Jim thought to himself that Jeff would surely recognize the mule as one of his own."

"Jeff spoke up, 'Jim, how long have you had that young mule?' Jim replied: 'Just a short while, Jeff said, 'I have a young mule on my Whitewater farm that is a good match for him. How will you sell me the mule?' Jim made a very attractive offer and Jeff gave him $25 to bind the trade. Cohen said, 'Now understand, Jeff, he is your mule, and the $25 belongs to me, whether you keep him or not.' 'Agreed,' said Jeff, not knowing he had bought his own mule from Cohen."

Busy Garden Period At Hand in Alabama

The busy time for Alabama gardeners is at hand. More vegetables are planted in this state during April than at any other time, according to A. P. Extension Horticulturist John Bagby. Bagby says early plantings usually give best results since the crops make better growth before extremely hot, dry weather sets in. Vegetables such as beans, corn and tomatoes won't pollinate well when the temperature is above 80 degrees.

After lying dormant all fall and winter, the peanut market has suddenly come to life. So many rush orders have come in to the Elba Peanut Mill that it has been operating two eight-hour shifts for the past three weeks, furnishing employment for a large number of people. Such industries mean more to the permanent improvement of conditions in this community than CWA or any other kind of government relief work.

There Was Room for Telephone Service Complaints

A survey of United Telephone and Telegraph facilities by C. C. Pierson, independent telephone consultant, for the Public Service Commission revealed subscribers in Elba had justifiable complaints about service here. Corrective action has alleviated but not cured all the ills, according to the report.

At the time of the inspection, dial equipment was found to be in operation but not as free of dust as in other United installations. An indication of previous dampness was found in the office. The present dial system was designed for a private at-tended branch exchange and not intended for normal exchange service. It was recommended that the entire central office be replaced with a dial system designed for the type service rendered here.

Fault was found with the attendant's position in that it was entirely inadequate to serve the exchange. Cord circuits were in a bad state of repair, 8 out of 17 being out of order at the time of the inspection. This left only 9 pair of cords to serve 13 toll circuits and 70 lines of the common battery service which carry all of the pay toll subscriber calls and calls from dial to manual lines.

Another peculiarity in the set up associated with the cord circuits is that they are located on the second floor while the attendant's position is on the first floor. Two men would be required to clear any case of cord trouble and only one is stationed in Elba.

As temporary relief, United now has in Dothan a man in a two-position at-tendant's board to replace the present one position board. It will have all the relays and wiring in the board and use of relays on the second floor will be discontinued. This is only temporary relief but should improve service materially, the report said.

Toll circuits (long distance) from Elba to Troy carried a heavy volume of traffic until about the first of the year when three additional circuits were added. The exchange served by 13 toll circuits as follows: Dothan 3, Enterprise 3, Andalusia 1, Troy 6. Overall load, which is low, is now 234 messages per circuit per average business day. The last two years we have made long distance calls since this survey was made, the operator has had to call us back because all of the circuits were not working. The delay was, however...

The outside plant is not in good condition...

MANY PRIVATE LOANS MADE—

Most Farmer's Home Administration Real Estate Loans Were on Family-Type Farms

Most of the Farmer's Home Administration real estate loans made in Alabama last year were for improvements and developments on family-type farms such as constructing and repairing farm buildings, adding more acres, fencing, improving soil fertility and establishing permanent pastures, the agency's local county supervisor, James S. Pridden, said this week. Loans are also available through the agency to purchase family-type farms.

Mr. Pridden also reported that most of the funds for farm ownership loans in the state were supplied by banks and other private lenders under the agency's insured farm loan program rather than through direct loans from appropriated funds.

This far during 1956 farm ownership loans have been made to: Malcolm R. Davis, Rt. 3, Elba; Willie J. Floyd, Rt. 3, Elba; Kibbie H. Johnson, Rt. 3, Elba; Milford W. Johnson, Rt. 3, Elba; Virgil Parker, Rt. 4, Elba; Marie R. Salter, Rt. 1, New Brockton. These loans include $30,000 insured loan funds and $23,900 direct loans from appropriated funds.

Here's More Evidence That Good Seed Pays

AUBURN—A recent South Carolina report has shown that use of certified seed pays off in increased cotton yields.

Ralph Jones of the API Extension Service this week told 1955 cotton demonstrations in that state to explain why he urges producers here to get the best cottonseed available for the 1956 crop. Certified seed planted on a five-acre demonstration plot produced an average of 115 pounds more lint cotton per acre than seed three or more years from the breeder. As Jones pointed out at current market value this extra cotton is worth $40 per acre. Yet the certified seed cost only 50 or 60 cents an acre more.

A higher yield was not the only value gained by using the better seed, either. Jones said certified seed in the South Carolina demonstrations produced a staple averaging one-sixteenth inch longer than the poorer planting stock.

According to the seed crops specialist, Alabama seedmen have on hand enough certified cottonseed of all varieties to plant three-fourths of our total acreage this year. Jones ended by saying that growers looking for ways to increase returns without a corresponding rise in cost will use these seed to up yields.

Room Air Conditioner Unfit for Egg Keep

AUBURN—Room air conditioners, so popular for dwellings, don't do the job needed for the maintenance of high egg quality unless some provision is made to restore moisture they take out of the air.

This statement was made by API Extension Poultryman Hoyt Warren. He explained that best conditions for egg storage include a 55 to 65-degree temperature and a humidity ranging from 70 to 80 percent and added that the humidity factor is only slightly less important than the temperature.

Warren said it's simple enough to correct this constant reduction of humidity in a conditioner-cooled room by placing large pans of water in the room so that they can evaporate into the air, by using wet sacks on the walls, or by spraying the walls. However, egg storage refrigerators, which are designed to add more moisture to the air as they lower temperature, are usually more satisfactory for preserving egg quality than are the room air conditioners.

SAME AS JANUARY 1955—

Commercial Slaughter Plants in Alabama Killed 18,000 Head of Cattle in January

Commercial slaughter plants in Alabama killed 18,000 head of CATTLE during January. This is an increase of 4,300 head from the previous month, but the same as January 1955. The number of CALVES slaughtered at 6,500 head compares with 5,800 in December and 6,800 a year ago. HOGS slaughtered at 66,000 head compares with 68,000 in December and 69,000 killed in January 1955.

UNITED STATES

Red meat production in commercial slaughter plants in Alabama totaled 2,477 million pounds and 13 percent above the same month last year. January 1955. Commercial meat production includes slaughter in Federally inspected plants and other wholesale and retail plants but excludes farm slaughter.

January beef production totaled 1,229 million pounds, 10 percent below the December and 15 percent more than January a year ago. The number of cattle slaughtered for the month totaled 2,235,600 head which was 7 percent greater than the 2,126,000 head slaughtered in December and 8 percent greater than the 2,083,500 head killed in the same month last year. January slaughter cattle averaged 964 pounds live weight. This was 12 pounds heavier than a month earlier and 37 pounds heavier than a year earlier. The New England States, North Carolina, Florida, Kentucky, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Nevada killed fewer cattle than in January a year ago, while Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana and Oregon killed the same. All other states slaughtered more cattle than during the first month a year ago.

January veal production totaled 115 million pounds. This

Scholarships Open for Forestry Study at API

Freshman scholarships from the Gulf States Paper Corporation are available to eligible graduates of Alabama high schools to study forestry at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. Dr. E. V. Smith, dean, School of Agriculture, has announced. Each scholarship is a gift of $8300 made possible by a grant from the Gulf States Paper Corporation of Tuscaloosa. The scholarships are available for the school year beginning with the fall quarter and will be awarded in March. Payment of $100 will be made to each recipient at the beginning of each quarter.

Any male graduate of an Alabama high school may apply if he has an acceptable scholastic record and is eligible to enter Alabama Polytechnic Institute. He must also have exhibited an interest in professional forestry and in earning a bachelor of science in forestry. Such past activities as a 4-H or FFA forestry project, attending forestry camp, or having worked full-time or part-time in some job related to forestry are considered evidence of interest in professional forestry.

Completed application forms with high school transcript and 1½ of high school activities must be mailed to Dr. E. V. Smith, dean, API School of Agriculture, Auburn, not later than April 1. Application forms are available from county agents, vocational agriculture teachers, school principals and district personnel, Alabama Division of Forestry.

Soil Acidity Accounts For Some Yield Loss

AUBURN—Soil acidity is eating its way into farm profits all over Alabama.

Farmers simply aren't using enough lime to get the best yield from crops they plant. Use of large amounts of acid-forming fertilizers and insecticides aggravated the condition until farmers now need at least five times as much lime for maximum returns as they apply annually.

This report comes from API Extension Agronomist J. C. Lowery, who said this week that soil tests show more lime is needed everywhere in the state except in the lime soils of the Black Belt. He explained that acidity cuts crop yields by chemically tying up certain plant foods so that crops can't use them.

Lowery gave soil testing as the best way to find how much lime is needed. He said that, by following recommendations, a farmer can give his soil just the right amount of lime for best results. The specialist added that one field section needs lime more than one every five to eight years.

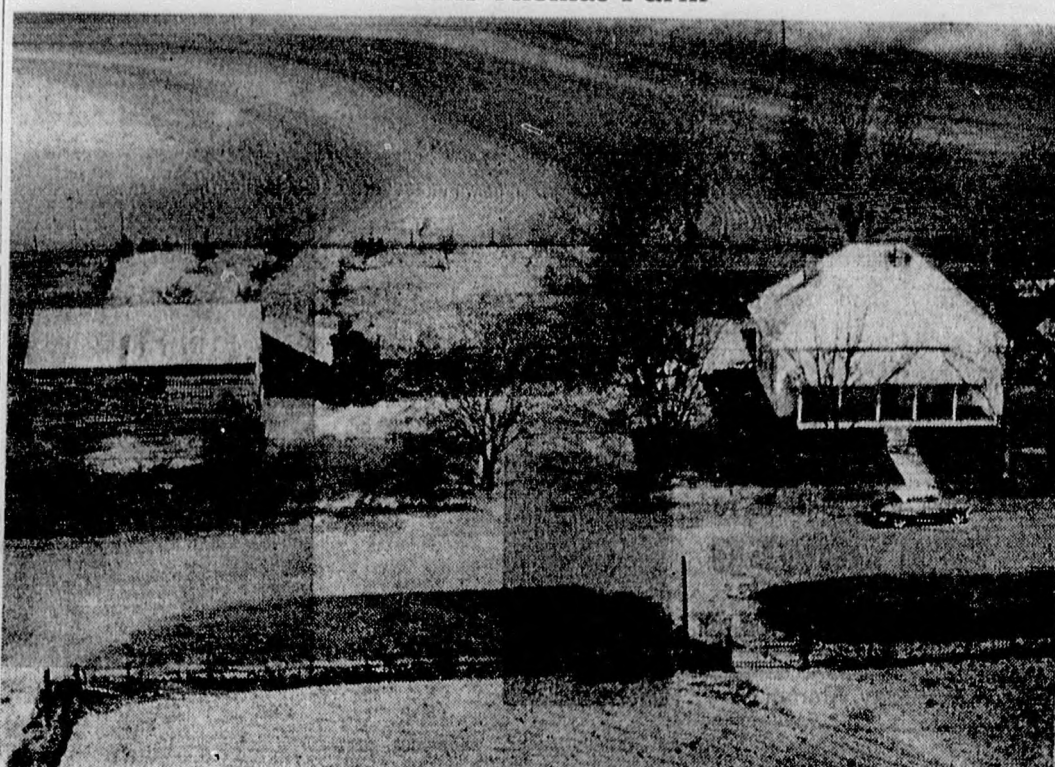

Fertilizing Gardens

Vegetable crops do better with heavy fertilization than with one heavy application. A good plan for fertilizing is to put out a small amount of complete fertilizer per foot of row every two weeks for six applications. Extra fertilizer will be needed on long-season crops like extra, pepper, egg plant and tomatoes.

Vacuum Cleaner

A vacuum cleaner is a handy and fast-working "mop-shaker." Dirt is sucked right off a dusty floor that's run over the nozzle of the cleaner.

FARM BRIEFS Farm Family Will Have Less Money

Feed accounts for about 80 percent of the cost of growing pork.

According to the Agricultural Marketing Service, production of prepared frozen foods was up 67 percent in 1955 over the previous year. Prepared products are those that have received one or more of the preparatory operations usually done in the home, such as cooking, salting, and peeling.

Alfalfa, sorghum, and peanuts are the most important crops in the home, such as cooking, salting, and peeling. Alfalfa, sorghum, and peanuts are the most important crops in the home, such as cooking, salting, and peeling.

John R. Buswell, Ed Hall, his peanut farm manager, and Clinton Hall, of Myrtle, Ga., say they wouldn't be without CRAG Herbicide-1 to kill weeds.

These Peanut Growers Swear By CRAG Herbicide-1 As A Real Money Saver

Mr. Ed Hall, farm manager for Mr. John R. Buswell, at Myrtle, Georgia, says:

"I am not going to plant any more peanuts without CRAG Herbicide-1. In 1955, I would not have gotten a peanut out of this field without this material. The grass would have taken them over before I could have harvested the crop. I only plowed this field twice and usually would have plowed it five times."

Mr. Hall is only one of hundreds of peanut farmers in Georgia who would not be without CRAG Herbicide-1. Preventing weeds means fewer cultivations and elimination of hand labor. Get CRAG Herbicide-1 from your dealer now. Save time and money while you grow a better crop of peanuts.

"CRAG" is a registered trade-mark of Union Carbide.

REGION CRITICALLY NEEDS PROTECTION—

Prosperity of South Threatened by Lack of Protection for Its Forests, Says Lowell Besley

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Unless the South acts speedily to increase the protection of its forests from wildfires, the prosperity of the region is threatened, Lowell Besley, general chairman of the Southern Forest Fire Prevention Conference, said.

"Despite the progress made in fire protection in the last 15 years, the South is the critical region of our nation with regard to adequate fire protection, since 78 out of every 100 acres of unprotected forest in the country are in the South," he said.

"In 1954, $35 million worth of timber was consumed by wildfire in the South, a region where only $15.5 million was being spent for protection and where only $27 million would give optimum fire protection to the South's 224.7 million acres of forest land."

"Fire protection, its growth, its need and its cost in the South will be discussed by the wildfire conference—the first South-wide meeting ever held to combat the menace—when it meets here April 13 and 14. A protected forest area is one where there is an organized system, including observation, communication, machines and men for the prevention and suppression of wildfires."

In the other 22 states of the South, out of every 100 acres is under such a system. In the South, only 83 out of every 100 acres is protected. Fifteen years ago, when 90 out of every 100 acres elsewhere in the country were protected, only 49 out of every 100 Southern acres was under a protection system.

Today in the South there are 382 million acres of forestland, 17 percent of the total 224.7 million acres, which are not protected. Since 1939, when there were 111.8 million acres under protection in the South, 746 million acres have come under such fire control programs.

"But that progress is not enough," said Besley. "Nearly half of the fires that in 1954 cost the South $35 million in lost timber and another $245 million loss to the economy, were on forest land that is unprotected."

"In 1954, for every 10,000 acres under the observation of a forester, there were about five fires. On every 10,000 unprotected acres, there were more than 12 fires."

"Furthermore, experience has shown that fires in protected forests, where detection is quick and efforts to extinguish them are determined and expertly directed are much less serious, as a rule, than fires on unprotected acreage where no one in particular is responsible for finding and reporting fires, or putting them out."

In our meeting we hope to demonstrate to the citizens of those states where fire protection is not yet universal, the dollar and cents advantage of a protection program."

In 1954, only six of the 16 Southern States had all their forest lands under protection. There were Alabama, Delaware, Maryland, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.

The Southern state with the greatest total unprotected acres of forests is Texas with 6,278 million acres. The state with the greatest percentage of unprotected land is Oklahoma, where 61 percent is unprotected. The percentage for Texas is 40 percent and the acreage for Oklahoma is 6,168 million acres. In descending percentage rank, the states are Kentucky, 42 percent; unprotected, Florida, 21 percent; Tennessee, 21 percent; Louisiana, 20 percent; Georgia, 10 percent; Arkansas, 1,883, and North Carolina, 1,326 million acres.

In unprotected millions of acres, the figures are, Florida, 3,965; Kentucky, 4,817; Mississippi, 4,026; Louisiana, 2,986; Georgia, 2,279; Tennessee, 2,170; Arkansas, 1,883; and North Carolina, 1,326 million acres.

Youngsters with Speech Difficulties Helped By Alabama Society for Crippled Children

There are at least 5,000 children in Alabama who have problems in speech severe enough to constitute a major handicap.

A stuttering child, one whose speech and hearing is impaired by brain injury, or one who suffers the fate of a cleft palate, cannot progress in school or community life along with his normal playfellows.

Helping these children is one of the primary aims of the Alabama Society for Crippled Children and Adults. Undertaking a pioneer role in the development of speech therapy programs, the Society helps maintain speech clinics in several key locations in Alabama.

Children from all sections of the state are given intensive therapy treatment at clinics held at Florence State Teachers College, the University of Alabama Speech and Hearing Clinic at Tuscaloosa, and the Alabama College Speech Clinic at Montevallo. Also in operation correct all forms of speech and hearing defects is the Birmingham Junior League Speech and Hearing Center where 75 children are currently including 13 from outside Jefferson County. Easter Seal dollars are helping support these vitally needed facilities. The drive is the annual fund raising appeal of the Society and is in progress throughout the nation now.

Alabama citizens are urged to buy and use Easter Seals to help restore countless unfortunate children into normal pursuits to which every individual is entitled.
